

Great health and safety myths

The myth Risk assessment must always be long and complex

The reality On its own, paperwork never saved anyone. It is a means to an end, not an end in itself - action is what protects people. So risk assessments should be fit for purpose and acted upon.

OK, if you're running an oil refinery, you're going to need a fair amount of paperwork. But for most people bullet points work very well indeed.

See what we mean - check out our example risk assessments.