The Small Business Trade Association Forum (SBTAF) is the voice of small business in HSE

What is it?

Formed in 2004, SBTAF aims to ensure that HSE hears the concerns of small business. Through the sharing of information and expertise (and a fair bit of lively debate!) it improves the way HSE communicates with small businesses.

The Forum acts as a 'sounding board' for the development of policy, guidance, new initiatives and proposed legislative changes – and ensures HSE takes full account of any impact on small businesses.

Do you want the voice of your members to be heard by HSE policy makers?

Do you represent small businesses?

Ten reasons to be part of SBTAF:

- 1 You have the opportunity to influence HSE policy-making.
- 2 It makes the best use of your time. The Forum meets four times a year to discuss current health and safety issues and their likely impact on SMEs.
- 3 It's not always London-based. Locations vary to help those based around the country. For example, the July 2008 meeting was held at the Health & Safety Laboratories in Buxton and included a tour of the facility. A meeting is also planned for HSE's new headquarters in Redgrave Court, Borehamwood, during 2009.
- 4 Attendance at meetings is not compulsory (though regular attendance is encouraged so everyone reaps full benefit).
- 5 Meetings last up to three hours. There are usually up to three brief presentations by HSE officials/SBTAF members on the latest health and safety issues of relevance to members.
- 6 You can keep in touch with SBTAF activities via the Forum's e-community; a special website open only to SBTAF members.
- 7 You have the chance to give your views on proposed legislative changes and guidance.
- 8 The meetings are a good way of receiving updates on HSE activities and of networking with other organisations.
- 9 You are part of a powerful network mainly consisting of trade associations which represent over 900,000 UK businesses.
- 10 And you have a genuine opportunity to meet and influence senior HSE officials and policy-makers. SBTAF meetings are chaired by HSE Board Member Judith Donovan, the representative of small business at board level. Recent attendees have included: Lord McKenzie of Luton: Lords' Minister for the Department of Works & Pensions; Dame Carol Black: Non-Executive Director of NHS Institute and the Health at Work Programme; Judith Hackitt: HSE Chair; Geoffrey Podger – HSE Chief Executive; Jenny E astbrook and Elizabeth Hodgkinson : Joint Heads of HSE Cross Cutting Division; Tony Bandle: Head of HSE's Business Involvement Unit.

Three key areas where SBTAF helps HSE develop initiatives in line with government policy:

HSE Simplification Plan – reviewed annually, this aims to reduce health and safety-related administrative burdens by 25%. SBTAF is an important consultation tool for HSE as it attempts to deliver better regulation and reduce unnecessary administrative burdens on small businesses.

HSE's "Think Small First" initiative – aims to encourage HSE policy-makers to consider small business needs first when devising/revising policy. The goal is to ensure that guidance and legislation requirements/changes are clear. It also aims to reduce legislative, enforcement and administrative burdens without reducing worker protection.

Government Enterprise Strategy – aims to make the UK the best place in the world to start and grow a business by improving the SME skills base and reducing administrative burdens.

Examples of SBTAF achievements

So how has SBTAF influenced HSE policy and improved health and safety advice for the benefit of small businesses? Here's some examples...

HSE Guidance on obtaining competent external health and safety advice: During October 2006 – 2007, SBTAF contributed to the development of two HSE publications advising SMEs how to obtain competent health and safety assistance from external consultants. Members advised that the first draft of "Getting Help With Health & Safety!" was not formatted to be useful for SMEs, as the guidance provided was too general to be of practical use. The guidance was subsequently revised to produce a more suitable format of short, simple questions SMEs could ask themselves when considering whether to employ a health and safety consultant. The second piece of guidance; "HSE Statement to External Providers of Health and Safety Assistance", was aimed at external consultants and was produced as a direct result of SBTAF feedback.

Example Risk Assessments: SBTAF is playing an ongoing part in the production of example risk assessments for small businesses. The aim is to create a series of example risk assessments, each specific to a different business sector, to show SMEs the kind of approach they might take to manage health and safety risks in their industry. To date, feedback from the Forum has contributed to the production of 29 example risk assessments, covering a wide range of industrial sectors from bookmaking to poultry farming. HSE is continuing to work with SBTAF to ensure that the assessments meet the needs of the industry they are tailored for and to distribute them to SMEs.

RIDDOR review: In 2006, SBTAF advised HSE during the review of the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases & Dangerous Occurrences Regulations (RIDDOR). Members emphasised the need for clear, accessible guidance to make it easy for small businesses to comply. HSE subsequently revised all RIDDOR related information on its website into a simpler, more accessible format, showing how easy it is to comply. This contributed to a reduction in the administrative burdens of complying with RIDDOR, saving UK businesses an estimated £16.5 million compared to previous years.

These form only part of the Forum's involvement in HSE activities since 2005. Membership of SBTAF offers a real chance to influence official policy for the benefit of the small business community.

Typical meeting

To give you an example of a typical SBTAF gathering, here are some of the subjects which appeared on the agenda of the January 2008 meeting:

- How HSE is working together with trade associations to promote the new leadership guidance and messages: Geraint Day from the Institute of Directors gave a brief overview of the new Directors guidance;
- Sensible risk management including example risk assessments;
- How HSE works with local authorities: a discussion of how HSE and Trade Associations can work together to improve the effectiveness of operational activity;
- Information Exchange – an opportunity for members to air any health and safety issues of concern.

The Forum is proud to have(?) access to the expertise of representatives from a wide range of industrial sectors. This ensures it has informed influence over HSE policy and projects.

SBTAF is chaired by Judith Donovan CBE, a non-executive member of the HSE Board.

Judith is a Yorkshire businesswoman, who ran her own specialist advertising agency from 1982 to 2000. During this time she was also chairman of Bradford TEC and the first ever female president of the Bradford Chamber of Commerce. Since selling her business she has also become vice-chair of Postwatch and a UK Board member of the Big Lottery Fund. She is also a trustee of the Northern Ballet Theatre and was Chair of the Yorkshire Tourist Board until this year. In HSE she is champion for both small firms and agriculture. Her drive and commitment to the Forum has secured its prominent role in HSE policy-making and in promoting health and safety as an integral part of business management.

Terms of reference

  - improve the perception of HSE and its relationship with the small business sector.
- 5 HSE and trade associations to share intelligence such as:
  - statistical information;
  - research on small business.

E-Community

As a member of SBTAF, you will have access to the Forum's e-community; a closed online website, available solely for the use of SBTAF members to facilitate discussion and the exchange of information between meetings. It enables users to engage in and establish new online discussions and receive updates from HSE, check the dates of forthcoming meetings, view papers from past meetings and suggest potential agenda items. When you join, the SBTAF Secretariat will e-mail you an invitation. (If you do not receive an invitation, please contact Claire Lonsdale on 0151 951 3377 or e-mail claire.lonsdale@hse.gsi.gov.uk)

The Secretariat advises that you save the group's web address to your 'favourites' list after logging in, to avoid losing the link.
