

WISEUP2WORK

www.wiseup2work.co.uk

IOSH wants to get young adults thinking about health and safety.

Why? In just five years, over 50 under-18s lost their lives in UK workplaces, and nearly 13,000 were badly injured. Across Europe, young people have 50 per cent more accidents than older workers.

But how do you deliver serious messages to an audience more concerned with iPods than injury stats?

Wiseup2work is our answer. This new interactive online resource is packed with high impact games and info to get the key messages across to work placement students, part-timers, apprentices and first jobbers. The site has plenty of materials and guidance for teachers, training providers, youth workers and employers too.

We're also encouraging young people to Speak up in a national competition to win state-of-the-art gadgets and VIP work placements.

www.wiseup2work.co.uk launches in April and is sponsored by the Learning and Skills Council

Leading learning and skills