

BIN MEN: THEY'RE ALL THE SAME

They all go to work. They all lift the equivalent of a double decker bus each day. They all cross the road on average 30,000 times a year. They all have two arms, two legs and a spine that is made out of bone. They all work in an industry that has a fatal accident rate 10 times higher than the national average. They all have families, and girlfriends, and wives, and children. They all need to work. They all need you to never over-load your bin. They all need you to drive safely around their waste and recycling lorry. And if you can do all this, they'd all be very grateful. Thank you for reading this on behalf of your bin man, and the Health and Safety Executive. We're here to make life safer for people in the workplace.

WATCH OUT FOR YOUR BINMAN.
