

Do we really 'love thy neighbour'?

By Andy Martin

HOW much do we care for those around us at work? Not much, if latest statistics are anything to go by. It seems the Great British workforce aren't that great when it comes to looking out for each other. We've become experts at ignoring dangers like spilt coffee or grease and masters of stepping over hazardous cables. 'Leave it for someone else' seems to have become the motto that we each live our working life by in the 21st century. But isn't that sad? I wonder, would we still consider it a pain to wipe up a little spilt coffee if we'd once seen a friend slip and break their leg?

PROFESSIONAL GARDEN SHEARS

- Teflon-coated blade
- Ergonomic handle

Reader offer
Just £12.99
RRP £19.99

AVAILABLE AT GARDEN CENTRES NATIONWIDE

It could hurt his employer too

Falls caused by slips and trips cost businesses £500 million each year. They are the most common type of workplace accident. If staff were encouraged to clean spillages and keep workplaces tidy, everyone could be saved a lot of unnecessary pain.

For free safety posters visit watchyourstep.hse.gov.uk or call 0845 345 0055.

Don't just see it, sort it.

Better health & safety benefits everyone

