Warning: You could lose your bin man for six months.

Bin men. They're all the same...

They all go to work. They all lift the equivalent of a double decker bus each day. They all cross the road on average 30,000 times a year. They all have two arms, two legs, and a spine that is made out of bone. They all work in an industry that has a fatal accident rate 10 times higher than the national average. They all have families, and girlfriends, and wives, and children. They all need to work. And they all need you to make sure they don't spend six months off through serious injury, by simply doing the following;

- Never over-load your waste and recycling bin.
- Drive safely and with caution around your waste and recycling collection workers' lorry.
- Keep all areas clear of obstacles and anything they could slip on.
- Please stick this sticker on top of your bin or anywhere where it can be seen.

Thank you for reading this on behalf of your bin man, and the Health and Safety Executive. We're here to make life safer for people in the workplace.
